WISE AND OTHERWISE.

LADIES' COLUMN.

Fashion Items.

—Almost any shape of wrap is fashionable.

—Garden parties bring out prettier dresses than balls.

—The day of short shoulder seams departs when the shirred waist comes in.

—Short Surrahs in half a dozen shades are made in imitation of changeable silks.

—Skirts finished with rows of machine stitching are to continue in fashion during the winter.

—It seems fashionable, just at present, to collect all the available sisters of a bride and bridegroom for bridesmaids.

—Evening dresses of black and white illusion are embroidered in colors, the design matching the flowers worn at the belt.

—Waterlilies are used for bridesmaids' bouquets, but are usually carried in baskets rather than in the hand. No green leaves are mixed with them.

—The chief bridesmaid at a wedding may, if it please her, wear a gown quite different from that of the other bridesmaids and still be very fashionable.

—The back breadths of over-skirts are no longer puffed. The newest way of arranging them is to let them hang in plaits, which are fastened to tapes sewed to the under side.

Shirred full waists will be worn with thick gowns during the winter, or else the dressmakers will throw away a great quantity of finished work, for they are making up all kinds of stuffs in that fashion now.

—Walking costumes of painfully masculine severity are announced for autumn. The under-skirt is laid in large plaits, and with it is worn a garment that looks like a cutaway coat. A linen chemisette and collar and a hat with long plumes are worn with this dress.

Miss Corson's Teachings.

Potatoes, any time of the year, can be made mealy if boiled in salt and water and drained and then covered with a thick towel and left in back of the range five minutes.

To retain the color of any vegetable plunge it into cold water after boiling.

Cooks make the mistake of boiling things too much. After reaching the boiling point meats should simmer. The toughest meats can be made tender by so doing.

HOME DOCTORS.

—Dr. Stark, Registrar-General of Scotland, says that "bachelorhood is more destructive to life than the most unwholesome trades, or than residence in an unwholesome house or district where there has never been the most distant attempt at sanitary improvement of any kind."

REMEDY FOR SEA-SICKNESS.—It is simply for the sufferer to wear a very tight belt round the waist. It has been recommended to many fellow passengers, and its use has proved invariably beneficial. The unusual motion, and sometimes the smells of the vessel, are the cause of the nausea felt. The tightened belt steadies the whole body, and, provided the sufferer be not bilious, soon braces him up corporally and mentally. If he is bilious (which he often is on account of leave-takings and festivities prior to his departure) the worst thing possible is generally recommended him—the ordinary brandy on board. Very fine old liqueur cognac in small doses can, however, be taken with advantage."

NEW REMEDY FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—M. Lecomteur has just given publicity to a plant which has a great reputation as a cure for rabies in the kingdom of Annam. This plant, of which the name is hoang-nan, is a kind of liana, closely akin to the false angustura. Its effects are similar to those of strychnine and brucine. M. Bouley, in Recueil de Medecine Veterinaire, regrets that no facts corroborative of its efficaciousness are given, but is of opinion that the property recently shown to belong to rabbits of easily contracting hydrophobia by inoculation should be utilized for making experiments thus so easily performed. In reference to this subject, M. Bouley related an anecdote about garlic, a substance which has always been in great reputation amongst remedies against rabies, and is constantly found as a principal integral portion in a large number of formulæ long kept secret. A young man had been bitten by a mad dog, and symptoms of rabies speedily appeared. His family, in a state of the greatest alarm, scarcely knowing what to do with the sufferer, shut him up in a loft where some garlic had been left to dry. In his delirium, the poor fellow seized the bundles of garlic, ate greedily of them, and soon became exhausted and fell into a deep sleep. When he awoke he was cured, and symptoms of rabies had disappeared.

VITIATED AIR.

Dr. Willard Parker, in a lecture before the students of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, used the following apt words: "If, gentlemen, instead of air, you suppose this room to be filled with pure, clear water, and that, instead of air, were exhaling twenty times a minute a pint of milk, you can see how soon the water, at first sparkling, would become hazy and finally opaque, the milk diffusing itself rapidly through the water. You will thus be able to appreciate, also, how at each fresh inspiration you would be taking in a fluid that grew momentarily more impure. Were we able to see the air as we are the water, we would at once appreciate how thoroughly we are contaminating it, and that, unless there be some vent for the air thus vitiated, and some opening large enough to admit a free supply of this very valuable material, we will be momentarily poisoning ourselves as surely as if we were taking sewage matter into our stomachs."

SICKNESS IN THE FARM HOUSE.

Dr. Goddar, Massachusetts, was once asked, and answered, the following question:

"Have you seen sickness produced by decaying vegetables in the cellars of farm-houses?"

"I think I have. For instance, the case of a farmer of means, his wife and five children. Four sickened in September of typhoid fever, and three died. In the cellar were found half decayed cabbages and other vegetables, half a barrel of old fish-brine, and filth generally, so that the smell was noticeable rods from the house, when cleared out by the doctor's direction."

Through that cellar, typhoid fever sneaked into the house. A writer in the New York Times says: "Miasm is the most subtle foe of the farmer's home. It is generated in his barnyard, cesspool, cellar; soaks into his well, and appears on his table in the form of a limpid water; enters his bedroom by night, and poisons the very air he breathes."

And all this from the want of a little intelligence and a little painstaking.

NERVOUSNESS.

One form of nervousness leads a man to suppose himself seriously ill, when, in reality, he is only more nervous than usual. He flies to a physician for relief, and often ends by persuading himself into a severe illness. The fact is, nervous people waste a great deal of money, confidence, and worry on their nervousness. It is perhaps disagreeable to very uncomely people that they are not beautiful; adult intelligent people of defective education lament the disadvantages of their youth; persons who desire to be religious, and yet are intellectually skeptical, are frequently made miserable by the conviction that they are incapable of acquiring piety. A man with a roman nose may as well bewail his incapacity to change the organ into Grecian outline as for nervous people to lament that they cannot discharge nervousness from their physical organization. It cannot be expelled. It is there to stay. But self control and self-restraint will do much toward obviating evil, and are more efficacious than the attendance of any physician.

The Benders.

A FULL CONFESSION—HOW THE FIRST VICTIM WAS KILLED.

OMAHA, Aug. 7.—Mrs. Bender, in jail at Fremont, said to-day that the first murder committed by her and her husband was in Illinois on a farm near Jacksonville. The victim asked for lodging and supper, and paying for the same in advance exhibited considerable money while eating supper. Bender cut his head in two and he was dumped into the cellar through a trap door arranged by Bender. The corpse was buried next morning back of the house. A few weeks after this they left town and remained eight months. They then went to Indiana on the murdered man's money.

They then went to Kansas, where Bender's children by his first wife, John and Kate, were living, with a cousin, Maggie. They kept a resort for travelers and called it Bender's Hotel. Had committed no murders previous to the old folks' arrival, but in the course of time old Bender arranged a trap door and then murdering operations began. Kate at one time had a man in bed with her and she cut his throat and slept till morning beside the corpse. His money was divided.

Kate never injured horse thieves and cut-throats who visited her house, but entertained them well, with her cousin, Maggie. No murders were committed by the family after they fled from Kansas. Old Bender has confessed, believing that the old woman has escaped. His story tallies with his wife's exactly. He relates the history of the whole family and their crimes. A sheriff from Kansas is now probably in Lincoln, obtaining a requisition from the governor, and will be at Fremont to-morrow.

KANSAS CITY, MO., Aug. 9.—The sheriff of Labeth County, Kansas, arrived early this morning with the two Bender prisoners, and remained here, fearing to proceed on account of a crowd, said to have gathered at Cherry Vale with intentions hostile to the prisoners. In the afternoon the prisoners were exhibited at the Theatre Comique, twenty five cents admission being charged. At five o'clock the sheriff left with the prisoners for Oswego, Ks.

OSWEGO, Kansas, Aug. 9.—The old couple supposed to be Bender and his wife arrived here from Nebraska this morning, and were exposed in the court house for some hours. Many persons went to see them, and a dozen who knew the real Benders pronounce these people impostors. The sheriff thinks they will be discharged to-morrow.

The Man With a Glass Eye.

As a train on the Kansas Pacific pulled away from the Sixteenth street depot, a few mornings since, a tall, angular specimen of humanity took a seat opposite a lady passenger, and, to all appearances, was intently engaged in studying her face. At first the lady treated the rudeness with good-natured indifference. But at last it began to tell on her nerves. It was a curious and astonishing piece of impertinence. He apparently had the faculty of looking two ways at once. One of his eyes was restless, excited, and roved in all directions. The other, fixed and stony, fastened on her with an undeviating stare. She turned her head away, but it intercepted her vision. She tried to hide behind a paper, but she felt that cruel eye piercing through the screen and creeping with a stony look all over her features. It seemed to be picking them up one by one, and examining them with care. The thing became unendurable, and she cried out to him fiercely:

"Sir, why do you look at me so persistently?"

"Me, madam; why, bless my soul! I haven't been looking at you."

"You have sir—for a half hour or more your eye has been absolutely riveted on my face."

"I beg your pardon, madam, but it's this eye, is it not?" lifting his finger to his left optic.

"Yes, sir, it's that eye."

"Well, madam, that eye won't do you any harm. It generally looks any way it pleases—it gives me a good deal of trouble. A great many complain of it. At first I thought they were making fun of me, but I've found out differently now. I've knocked down two or three men for the impertinence of that eye. I would leave it out altogether but [illegible] thing. It's a glass [illegible] glass eye. I hope [illegible] upon my soul, I'm [illegible] a glass eye should [illegible] pretty a woman," [illegible] other eye to bear up [illegible] admiration.

Stefano Beni looked at her fine [illegible] a dull pain seemed to tie him at his [illegible]

"So! I see how it is," he said, [illegible] "the old man's day is over."

But she flew to him, and hid her [illegible] on his shoulder.

"Dearest, dearest uncle," she [illegible] "that can never be. I will only love [illegible] the more."

That is what the young always [illegible] and for the moment, in the joy of [illegible] hearts, they believe it. They are [illegible] happy, that they credit themselves [illegible] boundless capacity for loving.

So say the young; but the old know better. They listen, they smile, they affect to believe; but, like Stefano, they know that their day is over.

Engaged—and not to "Tonio Moretti? Impossible!"

"Impossible, if you please, but true. It is I who say it."

To lodge in the Osteria del Cappello was to live in a house of glass. The gossips had La Giulietta's [illegible] their tongues' ends the very day [illegible] Stefano Beni had given his consent. [illegible] talked of nothing else that morning [illegible] the well.

"I tell you he was there all last [illegible]" said Monna Tereso. "A tall [illegible] with a reddish beard—a sailor [illegible] clothes."

"Ay; he had been round to the [illegible] in the afternoon to see Neighbor [illegible] and they returned together. My [illegible] happened to be coming home at the [illegible] and he followed them all the way [illegible] the Piazza Bra."

"Well, but who is he?"

"Where does he come from?"

"What is his name?"

"He comes from Venice—I know [illegible] for certain," says Brigida.

"What will Tonio say?"

"Poor Tonio! He'll be [illegible] angry, I'll warrant."

"And with reason. Tonio has [illegible] been well treated."

"No, indeed. Why, he has [illegible] Giulietta for the last twelve months."

"And now to be turned off for a [illegible] or whom nobody has ever seen [illegible] But there!—he was too good for her."

"I don't think much of the one [illegible] put over his head," says Monna Te[illegible]

"Neither of my girls would look at him," she says, scornfully.

"Well, well, there must be something at the bottom of it. He's well off, may be."

"Absurd!—a sailor, and well off! Those fellows spend their money as fast as they get it."

"Is it you who have thrown La Giulietta over, or is it La Giulietta has thrown you over, Tonio?" asked Dame Giannetta, meeting him in the yard as he was going to dinner. For being alone and a bachelor, the young man generally took his meals at the Osteria.

"What do you mean, Dame Giannetta?" he said, frowning.

"Eh, dear me! we all thought it was going to be a match!"

"Match or no match, what business is it of any one's?"

"No offense, Tonio—only one is surprised, you know."

"Surprised! What the devil are you surprised about?"

"Cielo! haven't you heard? Ah, well—I'm no mischief maker. Good-morning, Tonio."

And away went Dame Giannetta, leaving the vetturino to go to his dinner with what appetite he might.

Too proud to question any of those who would have told him the gossip of the place, he nursed his disquietude till the day's work was done; then made up his mind to pay a visit to the Benis, and bring matters to an issue. But he went first to his lodging, to smarten himself [illegible] became a suitor on his promotion.

He was a self confident young fellow enough; yet his heart beat quicker as he went up the stairs.

"You here?" said the wheelwright, himself answering the bell.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1880.

THERE is a rumor current that Sir CHARLES TUPPER is to resign his portfolio in the Dominion Cabinet to take an important position in the syndicate that is to assume the task of constructing the Canadian Pacific railway. The rumor, however, is discredited in well-informed circles.

The Fenians of England and Ireland have commenced to talk big again, and we may expect a responsive strain from the sons of Erin on this side of the water. Probably another opportunity will be presented for some sharper to make another haul out of the poor, but patriotic servants and laborers.

[illegible] from Afghanistan are to the effect that Candahar is surrounded by the Afghan forces, and that Ayoob Khan is engaged throwing up earth-works and making other preparations for a systematic siege. GENERAL STEWART, with the relief force, is pushing rapidly forward to the aid of the beleaguered city and the authorities are confident that GENERAL [illegible] will be able to hold out until reinforcements arrive. So far, the force of GENERAL STEWART has met with no opposition in its passage through the country.

[illegible] stronger evidence of the revival of business prospects of the Dominion is [illegible] than the very marked improvement which has recently taken place in railway securities. Grand Trunk [illegible] were selling in 1877 for 65 [illegible] the company succeeded in negotiating a five per cent loan at the unprecedentedly high rate of 105. The improved condition of Grand Trunk finances [illegible] have a beneficial effect upon the whole Dominion, as the interests of the country and the company are to a large extent identical. The money borrowed [illegible] the above favorable terms will be applied to reducing outstanding liabilities [illegible] and seven per cent, the company thus effecting a saving of nearly [illegible] per annum by the transaction.

One of the most important facts yet brought out by the Ontario Agricultural Commission is the superiority of Canadian over imported salt. In the face of a severe competition from English salt which is brought over as ballast on the return trip of freight ships, the Canadian product has maintained nearly absolute control of the home market, and not only that, but has succeeded in building up a good trade with the United States. Canadian salt is entirely free from magnesian and calcium chlorides, and is therefore better adapted to dairying purposes than either the English or American product. As this fact becomes recognized among our dairymen, the Canadian article will entirely replace the imported, and our market is absolutely secure against foreign competition. The report of the commissioners will have the effect of placing this fact more permanently before our people.

The Government of Great Britain is finding it necessary to adopt immediate and stringent measures for the preservation of the public peace in Ireland. During the late general elections the people were induced by the home rule leaders to expect so much from legislation in their interests that the rejection of the Relief bill by the House of Lords has had an exasperating effect upon their temper. Public meetings are on foot in every part of Ireland, to give expression on the [illegible] question, and the lords are vigorously denounced. Organizations of the peasantry are being formed to oppose the collection of rents until the differences with [illegible] are solved, and at a recent [illegible] addressed by a member of the [illegible] was publicly stated that as [illegible] as the land league reached three hundred thousand members, they hoped to be able to successfully strike against the payment of rent until their demands were acceded to. Arms are being secretly distributed among the members of the [illegible], and faction fights and collisions with the police are becoming alarmingly frequent. The situation is quite serious enough to warrant the gravest apprehensions on the part of the authorities.

[illegible] in England is greatly exercised over the marriage of Baroness BURDETT COUTTS to her private secretary, Mr. ASHMEAD BARTLETTE, which event has been postponed for a fortnight. The aristocratic element from the Queen downward, have spent their energies in vain remonstrance with the great lady, in order to prevent her lowering the dignity of her station by a mes alliance. The Baroness is a queen bee among the aristocracy of Great Britain, and her philanthropic practises of the past few years have made her name known and respected in every civilized country on the globe. As she had reached the very respectable age of 66, heart whole, it was generally expected that her many benevolent undertakings would be sufficient to engage her attention, without thinking of matrimony. The announcement made a few weeks since, that she had contracted an engagement, was therefore a disagreeable surprise, which was turned to something [illegible]

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Beaver.

DEAR SIR,—A ratepayer from Ernesttown, who has not the manliness to father his productions by signing his name to his effusion, undertakes to criticise the municipal representatives of the Township of Ernesttown for their action in the County Council. I have no objection whatever to legitimate criticism, believing that all men are fallible and therefore liable to err, but when parties skulk behind anonymous communications to air their views, their statements should invariably be received with a considerable amount of suspicion, if, indeed, they should be noticed at all. The communication in question contains but little that is worthy of notice, still, I have concluded to correct one or two of his more glaring falsehoods.

In the first place it is stated the representatives from Ernesttown favored a postponement of the Hooper matter from the March till the June session. The records of the council and the minutes published in the local papers at the time, will show that at the March session Mr. Aylsworth moved, seconded by Mr. Wood, that the Commissioners' report be adopted but the resolution was voted down.

Again, the correspondent states that at the June session the representatives from Ernesttown favored the postponement of the adoption of the Report until after Mr. Roe, on behalf of the ex-Treasurer, admitted a deficiency in the accounts, and when no further political advantage was to be gained, two of them voted for the adoption of the report. What are the facts as shown by the records? On the first day of the June session, before it was known that Mr. Roe was to appear before the Board, Mr. Aylsworth moved the adoption of the report, and his motion was only prevented from being carried by the opponents moving the postponement of the consideration of the resolution until Thursday.

The correspondent in question shows a lamentable ignorance of local affairs throughout his communication, which he should endeavor to correct by paying [illegible]

Marriage Licenses

[illegible] by Ogden Hines, at Cheapside, applications strictly private and confidential.

Frost.

A sharp frost was noticeable in several sections of this county on Monday morning.

School Taxes.

The school board ask the council for the sum of $5,117.00 for High and Public School purposes during the ensuing year.

The Schools.

Rural public schools opened for organization on Wednesday last. In towns, the high and public schools will reopen on Wednesday, the 1st September.

Sudden Illness.

Mr. Samuel Mel., Dabler, was taken suddenly ill in Mr. W. Jay's shop on Monday, and falling against some iron bruised his face pretty badly. We are pleased to learn that he is convalescent.

Real Estate Note.

Mr. John A. Cuff has purchased the rough cast house next his residence from T. B. Cas[illegible] Esq. He intends to refit the premises and put them in first-class condition for renting, and any party wishing to secure it should apply at once.

Very Low.

The water in the river is very low, notwithstanding the copious rains received during the season. The supply in the canal is insufficient to run the factories, and only two mills are at present operating—the Big Mill and Perry's mill, the latter being supplied from the river direct.

Street Preaching.

[illegible]

Civic Holiday.

Yesterday was a Civic Holiday in Napanee and the day was pretty generally observed.

River Improvement.

A party has been engaged during the past week blasting the rock at Fitzroy, with a view to improving the water supply along the Napanee river.

From Belleville.

On Wednesday, an excursion under the auspices of the True Blues arrived from Belleville, per steamer Armenia and remained the afternoon.

Recovering.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Charles Hough, who has been confined in the Kingston Asylum for some months, is slowly recovering, and it is hoped by his friends that he will finally regain his mental equilibrium.

Cheese.

The price of cheese has remained good throughout the season, and factories have been paying good dividends. We learn that several sales of July cheese have been made in the county at eleven and a quarter cents.

Our High School.

Napanee High School is deserving of great credit for the successful preparation of candidates for the Third Class examinations, nearly all of those who went up being successful. Eighteen pupils passed—twelve having been awarded A's and six B's.

Improvement.

Mr. C. D. M. Chambers, is building an addition in the rear of the block recently purchased on the north side of Dundas street, and is also having a cellar excavated under the main building. The firm of Perry & Chambers, druggists, will occupy the premises about September 1st.

The Model School.

The Napanee Model School will commence on the 30th of August, when the class for training of non professional teachers will be organized. Candidates are expected to present themselves on the first day. The class is expected to be a very large one, fully up to the official limit of twenty-five.

Seriously Ill.

We regret to learn that Mr. James Stewart, successor to John Henderson, is seriously ill at his boarding house, his physicians having forbidden his attendants to mention business to him. The store is under the management of Miss Henderson, who will give customers all necessary attention.

No Petitions.

It must be that Napaneeans are becoming a happy and contented people, who have nothing to ask and nothing to hope for. [illegible]

SPENCER'S OLD STAND.

the hour being suddenly opened, he almost ran—almost a man on the other side of the door—bold.

"I buy your pardon," said the young gentleman, stepping quickly back.

And then, full light of the hall—all lamps on the ceiling, "Tonio Moretti recognized the attaqueur of the Piazza Rea.

"Is not Cesare Donato's carnival visit in character of an antique Venetian—that of the gondolier coming was his first. So far, so reasonable, the gondolier was rich. That there has been a secret admirer, appearance on the part of Neighbor Stefano, appears are serious—and disruption all round—of the love were positive. No amount of reflection will have convinced them that the lover never met in their lives in little more than a week ago, and that they fell in love at first sight.

"Morrow being the feste of some popular saint, it was arranged that La Gioletta should spend the night with Donato's Venice for the day, to see his ship the last Dimanche, thereby in harbor. So, when wish's close over the train hall and planning the excursion the morrow and arrangements passed satisfactorily, but pleasantly. They were to start and in order to have a long day, and Donato proposed that they should take the first experience Venezia at 7 a.m. This world gin [illegible] upon or turn in Venice, as [illegible] morning early in the morning.

[illegible] suggested that they should [illegible] at the station and thus it was settled. Weather permitting, you know, and no [illegible]

"I promise a continental visit, a [illegible] and sunshine from dawn till dusk."

"Yes, say, said La Gioletta, certainly [illegible] alone can do that.

"I have merely resolved to propitiate the [illegible] that they night with a sperm [illegible]

[illegible] Madonna. Gondolier permitted [illegible] to be propitiated, for the weather [illegible] turned out not as Donato predicted. [illegible] was sulkiness morning more brilliant [illegible] and cool the sky dome [illegible] blue, glass and city flooded with [illegible] sunshine. At five the bells began clamoring in the campaniles and at half past [illegible] the wheelwright and his wife passed out to the south gate yard, and took their way [illegible] the Venice's campagna station.

[illegible] Venetian's early, but real [illegible] they had the set fell in their faces a [illegible] way. But Stefano then was the lest man [illegible] world to fling away a couple of lire [illegible] for even though it was a fête [illegible] of smoke and a stream of people in [illegible] and [illegible] raise and presents [illegible] to Moretti, with new rosettes at [illegible] and a cambrelas in her bottom [illegible] true pastiem at a gala, by twitter [illegible] of American soldiers. The girl shrank [illegible] and clung to her mate as large [illegible] steel, seeming not to see them war [illegible] a kind of fear.

[illegible] to the, in smile, as many like [illegible] another brother bottoms, [illegible] [illegible] at the station to meet them.

"I'e are friends," [illegible] said Moretti, [illegible] cap, and [illegible] in [illegible] and collar. He [illegible] [illegible] at least thinks La Gioletta [illegible] and shy, and he [illegible] afraid of her lover [illegible] under.

The master of a vessel bringing visitors [illegible] the ship on a festa day is bound to [illegible] uniform, he sets up opinion of [illegible] a question of discipline.

A question of discipline. The gin began [illegible] understand that this Donato, whom [illegible] had learned to look upon as a [illegible] town, belonged to a class far above the [illegible] and herself had been and lessons [illegible] the mysteries of a trading craft, that [illegible] was to do, that he saw what [illegible] "Venezia" a good match. [illegible] she [illegible] been told, but it had made a [illegible] impression on her. Now for the first time, she [illegible] that he was a man whom other men [illegible]

Had are presently seated in a second class compartment, bound for Venice. In time, [illegible] and Stefano [illegible] Donato [illegible] Venice has created on payin [illegible] ticket and between, notwithstanding that he is secretly of opinion that [illegible] time the cheap train where [illegible] after his express would have answered [illegible] purpose as well.

The girl has never been to Venice [illegible] before has she travelled by rail. Her [illegible] was to Mantua and back, by an ordinary [illegible] train, some three or four years ago. At first the express speed frightens her. Be [illegible] stands close to watch the flying landscape. The terror soon wears off, and presently [illegible] Donato's fear attention to two small [illegible] [illegible] all the one standing high up [illegible] the rain, the other half way between [illegible] and the summit, and comparatively [illegible] These are the castles of the future [illegible] the scattered strongholds [illegible] not so good as Montecelli, and Rimes we [illegible] born within walls.

[illegible] pass Venice with its lofty towers [illegible] with its domes, and soon a town [illegible] crossed. Mestre is reached, and [illegible] Mestre be a silver lake stretching away [illegible] horizon, quaint fishing boats with [illegible] sails slowly have and [illegible] across that placid waste. Yonder are [illegible] three or four black specks—[illegible] are far away, from the midst of a low lying bank of soft warm haze, rise the rendezvous [illegible] and cupolas of Venice.

[illegible] the entire scene upon the long bridge and the shining waters are all around them. [illegible] mainland becomes a strip of of sand in the distance; the dream-like city rises higher and nearer, and then, all at once, they stand on speed, run under cover, and come to a dead stop in a station—a big commonplace railway terminus like any other, full of steam and bustle.

"It's a very well," says Tonio Stefano; "but I find it best as it stand to be in my time, when you took a boat and rowed across from Mestre. It don't seem natural to come to Venice by railway."

Now they disembark upon a broad flight of water-washed steps, and there is a general rush toward the gondolas, of which a black fleet is drawn up, waiting for hire. And now, from amid a crowd of porters, good-loers, and hotel touters, there steps a smart sailor, who touches his broad-brimmed straw hat, puts a whistle to his lips, and blows a shrill note that rings high above all the din of voices.

Instantly from the opposite side of the canal there darts forward a trim long-boat manned by six rowers, who hoist their oars in salute when Donato comes down the steps.

"Round the Grand Canal," says he, handing La Gioletta to the cushioned seat in the stern.

So they take their places. Then the oars are hoist to their oars; the boatmen shove the long boat shoots out into the middle of the stream. And now, as they cleave their rapid way, the green water scintillating at every stroke, there is unfolded a wonderful panorama—a panorama of pillared palace fronts laid with opaque marble; piazzas, rococo churches of "old brown brick; and stately half towers, with grotesque bells

[illegible]

"What is this?" she asked, shyly.

"This is the Palazzo Rea," said Tonio.

"It is on the other side of the Canal. Have you never wondered, Donato, why the Rea Palace [illegible] Rea's house? Because it is the Palazzo Rea, because of the old palace that other Rea was confiscated and Count was put out, eh?"

"Oh, I have never been before Rome and Gaeta."

"Ah, long before."

"And you mean to be, Tonio? Why, you are so learned as Padre Agostino?"

"Who is Padre Agostino?"

"He is the priest, you know, who teaches me."

"Ah, he is a good man, I know, and I learned—I am learned! He knows not only Latin, but Greek; and he has written a book."

"He must be a wonderful man," said Donato, smiling. "But what will you say if I tell you that I have a friend at Rest, a cousin of Cardinal Donato, who knows Hebrew and Arabic as well as Latin and Greek, and who has written at least a dozen of books, some of which are big as three lengths of oars? Yes, and he is only a little older than you were looking at just now?"

The girl lifted her eyes to him in wonder. A cousin of the cardinal! It was as if he had said that he was intimate with the Pope!

The wheelwright, meanwhile, was passing another cigarette to a small dusky man that hung near the cabin door. It was a mostly made little man, like a fury stroke, and it and folding arms resented on silver hinges, and a silver top-hole. The whole thing, frame and all, did not measure more than eight inches by six.

"May one ask what this is?" he said.

Donato took a small cover her from his watch chain, unlocked the case, and disclosed a couple of miniatures on a back-ground of purple velvet. The one was a manly hand—a boy's hand, apparently—set church-like in a nest of clouds against a back-ground of lilies; the other represented a lady dressed in the short waisted fashion so familiar to everyone in the portraits of the Princess Charlotte and her contemporaries.

The girl's color changed.

"How beautiful!"

She said it, as it were, under her breath, and with a sinking heart. She detested to see whose portraits they were. Could it be that her lover had already been a husband and a father?

"My mother," said Donato, with tender seriousness.

The wheelwright pulled out his spectacles, signed them carefully, and stared at the miniatures in respectful silence. La Gioletta's eyes filled with sudden tears.

"She was very beautiful, Sir; she died many years ago, when I was a lad."

"And this?" said old Stefano. "Is this your own portrait?"

Donato, a yet graver shade shading over his features, shook his head.

"My younger brother," he said softly.

"He is living?"

But the girl, with a woman's quick sympathy, saw now it was not mentioned for him.

"No, no," she said, hurriedly. "Don't ask—it pains him.

Donato closed the cheap locket and turned the boy in silence. Then he drew to his side, and kissed her on the forehead.

"I have only you, dear," he said.

Five minutes later they were in a gondola, gliding across the shining waters, and waiting for the landing place in front of the Piazza di St. Marc. And then the rest of the afternoon—it was only in a manner of speaking—passed in a dream of intricate canals crossed by innumerable bridges; of narrow streets traversed by arcades; of churches and palaces without, and all golden glorious of mosaics and paintings within; of islands lying afar off in the warm haze of the shining sea; of gardens, and public squares, and [illegible] military bands; of the soft lapping green waters against marble steps; of swimmers in the sea, and a magical twilight; of night and the stars, and the flying train again. And then home.

CHAPTER XLVI.

UNDER THE DARK ARCHWAY.

"I am hardly believe that it was not a dream.

It was La Gioletta who spoke. Her eyes, tired after his day's work, had dropped misty in his chair. The lovers were sat upon the balcony, talking about Venice. It was a little after eight in the evening. The sky was dark overhead, and [illegible] gloomy [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] Anita, with her bronze and her three-legged stool, had cleared out long ago from under the archway; the bedroom of Isaiaria was over for the day; and only here and there between alien and basement was a lighted window to be seen, for a ready mood of the holiday in the Calcaria dei Cappelli seem gone to bed.

"But tell you here room Venice by moonlight," replied Donato; "there indeed, you will say it must be a dream. When I like to go into a gondola, and go about the side streets at night, gliding silently out of dark alleys into light, and back again into darkness. Everything is ghostly. You round a corner, and something yellow into the water behind you—it moves as if a murder might have been done. You pass under a balcony, and hear voices in chilly conversation; or under a lighted window, and listen to a woman sighing within. Every house seems full of mystery, every gondola you meet seems to carry a secret."

"I don't think I should like it," said the girl. "I would be afraid."

"But if I were with you, dear?"

"Ah, no—not with you."

"You would go anywhere, and leat safe on a stone, with me?"

"Anywhere?"

"There are so many places to which I should like to take you—my, and to which I will take you by-and-by. Beautiful islands, where fauns grow to the size of trees, and pine woods, peopled with nightingales and fireflies, come down to the water's edge. Some of them are small islands, built up from the bottom of the sea by myriads of tiny insects. There are places in which wonder is unknown. Then in summer we will steer northward, to the coasts of Sweden and Norway, where there will be no darkness, and the sun will come sweeping round and round the heavens, just at one place to which I shall take you. Do you know what it means to be a child of eight. You can hardly believe that? Yet it is true."

"How much you know!" she said. "How much you have to know!"

"In other seasons I will plaything up-stairs of knowledge by the way. We do not go to sleep until we quit Venice."

"Ah, but I am not an Englishman."

"I am cool and calm, and keep my lamp and my lodgings."

"But I am not like them."

"You know further," she said, "and other foreign tongues perhaps, [illegible] [illegible] I know one [illegible] other tongue."

"Which?"

"I sometimes think I am too fond of it."

"Yes? And what could be the [illegible] [illegible] sometimes? Ah, I [illegible] [illegible] Hop, my little bird, not [illegible]
